I've been an Internet addict since it's beginnings, spending countless hours on line, often through the night. I've been a member of dozens of newsgroups ("Message Boards" or "bulletin boards" before that), have read and posted THOUSANDS of messages. Of all the messages I've read, the one Andrew Price just posted (Skiptracing VIA the Internet) was the most impressive.

I was FLABBERGASTED to discover that it contained over THIRTY pages of search sites, reviews of many of them, and instructions on ways to conduct searches. While I knew many, if not most, of these sources Andrew shared some GREAT info that I haven't even discovered in the several books I've read on conducting Internet searches and investigations. Andrew's post is a priceless gift for anyone involved in private investigation or skip tracing. I strongly urge everyone to print it out, as I did. I doubt there is any investigator, no matter how experienced, who won't learn something from Andrew's incredible effort. Many of us have spent countless hours and big bucks to gain just a portion of the knowledge that Andrew Price has just shared for free. THANKYOU ANDREW! You da' MAN!
